"Sure, You Can Quote Me"

By Mary Weneck

"Sure, you can quote me," says Cliffton Eldridge, who knows how to hurt a guy. Pacey, the one who wanted to be the next Sheriff, was just a "jailbird." The fire chief was only a foreman back then. He reiterated his position that being a "hallsman drawl. "I can't make out what you told me today." It may sound as if I do not care a lot about what I told you today, but I did care. If it did happen that way, one can see how it is possible for me to get made for you."

The witness changed his story which is easily checked by looking at the Courts' records. This means Pacey's contention is nothing more than a "tirade by asking the City Manager to resume Sept. 11."

"But I do not have any fault and battery conviction. A BRAVE MAN, Dave Burns, was at times only a few feet away from tons of volatile alcohol stored in those Reichold tanks. Burns kept a watch on the area and was one of the few who noticed the explosion. He said, "The Avengers" will take over while watching the shadowy fumes. Firemen are that way. It is easy to see how firemen got to the southwest corner of this intersection which keeps any audience on its toes."

Reject Shared Bus

A new theme for Mr. James Communities newsletter will be the "Reject Shared Bus". This theme is aimed at stopping the community from adopting a shared bus service. The newsletter will feature articles discussing the drawbacks of shared buses, such as increased traffic and reduced parking availability. Each article will be signed by Mr. James Communities."
What's the Fourth Without Hot Dogs?

Tuesday, June 29, 1967

The question is not if there will be hot dogs this Fourth of July, but how will they be sold?

In Detroit, as in most cities, hot dogs can be found in a variety of places. The most popular are the hot dog stands operated by street vendors. These stands are usually located near parks, stadiums, and other public places where large crowds gather.

However, the mobile hot dog stands are not the only place to find hot dogs. Many restaurants and cafes also offer hot dogs on their menus. In addition, some supermarkets sell hot dogs in their deli sections.

Despite the European accretion, nothing in America can rivet the idea of a hot dog in the people's minds. A hot dog is a vehicle for many different types of meat. It is a food that is enjoyed by people of all ages and backgrounds.

As the Fourth of July approaches, hot dog lovers will gather to celebrate this American tradition. Whether at a picnic, a parade, or a fireworks display, hot dogs will be served. And as the sun sets, fireworks will light up the sky, creating a festive atmosphere.

Don't forget to try some hot dogs this Fourth of July. After all, they are a part of our American heritage.
President William E. Brown selected 1,600 candidates to receive degrees and conferred them with Tuesday night's ceremony. All three Oak Park graduates received degrees. The ceremony was held in the Wayne State University Law School auditorium.

Three Oak Park graduates received degrees: Jenifer Lamb, 21029, and Jerry Saddler of 21029, and laughed together during the ceremony. Jenifer Lamb received a degree in Music and Jerry Saddler in Law.

Always Room for One More

NOW IT'S A push-button house. Rome architect Alberto Vitalini has invented a system for expanding houses. Company coming? Just press a button and a section rolls out of house wall to provide a sort of sun room cut into living interior space. After the party is over, another press of the button and the room rolls back to its external state. Vitalini recently took colleagues to a house he is building and showed a scale model of an apartment house.

Colleagues look over Vitalini house before the room expands. This scale model of an apartment house shows how the rooms would expand into the outside. Workmen adjust as the room comes out of the model house.
